New Building Will House Four Different Departments

A milestone will be reached for the Nisqually Tribe when the new building housing four different departments will be completed south of the new Green Foot shop and near the canoe journey grounds.

The 24,000 square-foot building will house transportation, public works, operations and maintenance and the building department.

"The number one best thing about this building is that these are departments that work with each other all the time and now there won't have to be the constant effort of connecting due to the haphazard locations all over campus," said Wayne Lloyd, Building Department Director for Nisqually.

Included in the facility are:

- Large garage bays with the wells underneath to work on vehicles as well as a covered area outside that can also be used.
- A specific area for working on heavy equipment and larger vehicles owned by the tribe such as backhoes and buses
- A reception area for each of the four departments, offering a clear point of contact
- Break areas for each of the departments. Maintenance currently often has their breaks outside under a tent. Their area will be large with a work area to do timesheets and heat up a lunch or retrieve it from the refrigerator, reflecting the transient nature of their work where most do not need an office
- Two conference rooms, one larger and a slightly smaller one to be used by all departments
- Improved storage for all including one for maintenance that will be accessible from outside of their new office space.

This project will also be the tribe's largest solar system yet. With all the Nisqually Tribe vehicles now in one place, there will be covered car ports that will have solar panels on them along with panels on the building itself. A good example of this use of solar panels on parking structures is located at Arizona State University.

Additionally, six more electric vehicle charging stations will be installed, with plans to apply for grants to add more.

"We have also installed the electric and plumbing hookups for the future vocational training building which we hope to add in the next one to two years," Wayne said.

The building is slated for completion this fall.

Yelm Stage Blessing

By Debbie Preston, photos by Jack George, Nisqually Tribe Communications and Media Services

The Nisqually Canoe Family opened and blessed the Yelm Park stage that was built by Nisqually Tribe Construction the weekend of June 22. There were many performances following the blessing and the stage will host events all summer long.

Garden Stand

By Debbie Preston

The new Nisqually Garden Stand opened for the first time June 21 in the Nisqually Valley on the Medicine Creek garden property. The building needed the least renovation to make a good stand and is now well insulated with a heat pump and coolers for the produce.

In the near future, an industrial grade composter will automatically create good garden compost in about 12 weeks, monitoring temperature and other important measurements for creating great soil for use on the farm. (The automatic part being the turning of the items in the composter.)

Along with the usual

wonderful produce, the crew is working to create a space for young children to participate in garden

activities with raised beds for their height and tables for craft activities. A garden test kitchen is also nearly finished and a traditional foods garden is also underway using the wetter location to add a pond and cattails, among other things.

"We have a lot of great things happening and we can't wait until we can get everything underway," said Chantay Anderson, tribal Program Manager for the Garden.

Talley Farm Teaching Kitchen and Market

Building Department Newsletter Article By Jessie Fox, Executive Assistant to the Building Department Director

The Building Department has been hard at work on Talley Farm. Our Carpentry, Electrical, Plumbing, Heavy Equipment, and Painting crews have taken the existing pool house and turned it into a teaching kitchen. This project, which has been in progress since February, is set to be completed by the end of July.

The new kitchen was reframed, drywalled, and painted inside and out. It features brand new plugs, switches, and lighting, and includes AC and a ductless heating system. New cabinets, a sink, and a stove round out the interior. Outside, there is a new irrigation system, which will benefit the garden area.

This new addition to the farm will be a place where people can come together to can and dry foods and learn to make traditional medicines and remedies.

More information, including the kitchen's opening date, will be provided in the future by Chantay Anderson, the Garden Project Supervisor.

Herring Surveys

In years past Nisgually Indians harvested herring spawn along the shoreline of the Nisqually Delta area, especially near Sequalitchew Creek. This harvest was possible because of the great productivity and abundance of herring in Puget Sound.

This herring abundance also fed juvenile salmon, especially Chinook, as they left the Nisgually River on their way to the Pacific Ocean. Herring tends to school in large numbers and socalled "herring balls" in the Nisqually area provide an important source of food for many animals, including sea birds.

harbor seals. harbor porpoises, humpback whales, and many species of salmon.

Unfortunate

ly, due to the lack of regular herring spawn in the Nisqually Delta, the shoreline harvest of herring eggs is not currently possible at Segualitchew Creek. Herring numbers in Puget Sound have greatly reduced in the past 40 years and this reduction could very well be related to the reduced number of Puget Sound Chinook salmon (in 1999 Puget Sound Chinook salmon, including Nisqually, were listed as threatened under the Endangered Species Act).

In partnership with the Long Live the Kings organization, your Natural Resources Department in recent years has been doing research on herring in the Nisqually area. The research project runs from 2021 to 2025; its goal is to better understand herring abundance and use within Nisqually Reach, and ultimately to inform salmon and herring recovery actions. Partner organizations are doing similar research in other parts of Puget Sound. The Nisgually effort is lead by Jed Moore, a DNR research biologist.

"It turns out that different herring stocks have greatly different spawning timing and that this timing may relate to the timing of when Chinook leave their natal rivers," Jed explains. "We search out herring in the Nisqually area, take samples to determine genetics and age. Our main sampling area is Oro Bay, on Anderson Island."

The results thus far are exciting. Genetic data indicate that the adult herring captured in Oro Bay places -

although the primary spawning location of this stock has not yet been found.

Parasites

Other interesting results include the likely variation in spawn timing between the three stocks. The Oro Bay stock seems to spawn later in the year than the Squaxin Pass and Elliott Bay stocks. This later spawn timing makes Oro Bay juvenile herring the right size to be eaten by Nisqually Chinook as they enter South Puget Sound in July and August. Herring are an especially nutritious food source for iuvenile Chinook salmon during their first few months in Puget Sound.

Jed said, in summary: "This exciting research has drawn our attention to a stock of herring that was previously unknown. As we continue our research through 2024 and 2025, we expect to gain more insights about this local stock of a critical fish species."

Summer Bash

It was a great afternoon for the Nisqually Youth program's Summer Kick-Off event – there was all kinds of food and Kona Ice on a hot day, community resource tables, tie-dye table, water slides, dunk tank and four-person trampoline bungee. There was also Language Bingo with the Nisqually Language Department and many art activities too. The event was hosted by Nisqually Tribe Youth Servcies, Nisqually Tribal Health and Wellness Center, ICW, Community Services, Emergency Management, Nisqually Police Department and others.

Nisqually Indian Tribal Housing Summer Clean Up

By Alison Kautz

The Nisqually Indian Tribal Housing Department hosted a Summer Clean-Up event on Friday July 12. Housing Dept designed t-shirts with a custom logo and provided tools (grabbers, brooms, gloves, and blowers) to make the job easier. Over 75 tribal members and their families joined them to assist in the removal of debris and trash from the 4th of July festivities on the upper and lower reservation streets.

On behalf of Nisqually Indian Tribal Housing, we would like to thank the community members and employees for partaking in the Summer Clean Up event. The contribution and effort putting towards living in a healthier, safer, cleaner reservation.

NITH would like to congratulate all the raffles winners, participants, and volunteers who dedicated their time and hard work! Thank you to all those that participated and joined in the efforts to keep our reservation looking beautiful!

Please join us for our next event which will be the Nisqually Indian Tribe Housing Fair September 13, 2024 – 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.!

Lunch will be provided, raffle drawings, and the first 40 people to sign in will get a bag with cleaning supplies and tool kits!

All applicants who complete the housing survey will be awarded a gas card! Check out our vendors, contractors, and so much more!

Beat the Heat

By Addie Spencer, MD and Mary Szafranski, RN

Summer is here! And we can expect some days of extreme heat. Here are tips for staying healthy when the temperatures rise.

Take care of each other. Some people are at high risk for heat related illness, so check on them frequently.

- Children
- Elders
- Outdoor workers
- Folks with disabilities

Stay cool.

- Hang out indoors where there is air conditioning.
- Wear light, loose fitting clothes
- Avoid exerting yourself.
- Take cool showers or baths.
- Avoid using the oven and eat light meals.
- Never leave any people or pets in the car.

Stay hydrated.

- Drink plenty of water even if you don't feel thirsty.
- Avoid alcohol and sugary drinks that pull water out of you.
- Consider your need to replace electrolytes if you are sweating a lot.

Know the signs of heat related illness. Heat Stroke:

- High body temperature (103°F or higher)
- Hot, red, dry, or damp skin
- Fast, strong pulse
- Headache
- Dizziness
- Nausea
- Confusion
- Losing consciousness (passing out)

Heat exhaustion:

- Heavy sweating
- Cold, pale, and clammy skin
- Fast, weak pulse
- Nausea or vomiting
- Muscle cramps
- Tiredness or weakness
- Dizziness
- Headache
- Fainting (passing out)

Summertime is for fun! So take care of yourself and others so the fun never stops! If you have any health concerns, call to schedule a visit with your medical provider at NTHWC 360-459-5312 option #1.

What is a root canal and why do I need one?

A root canal is a dental procedure on the pulp, or heart, of the tooth. A root canal is a treatment which may allow traumatized or severely decayed tooth to be saved in the mouth for function and aesthetics.

To understand this a bit easier, please see the diagram of the anatomy of a tooth. Each tooth has its own pulp, or heart, which provides blood flow and life to each tooth. This pulp resides under the hard, white outer layer of enamel and encapsulated within the more porous section of dentin. When a tooth is traumatized by sudden force or deep decay the pulp may become injured or sick, and at times die for unknown reasons. A dentist will gently remove the pulpal tissue completely. Once fully cleaned, the tooth is sterilized then filled and sealed.

This procedure allows a tooth to remain in the mouth without being connected to any nerve endings or blood flow of the body. For a tooth to be fully protected following a root canal procedure a permanent restoration will be needed. Without the blood flow into the tooth, a tooth can become brittle or weakened. The restoration will protect the tooth from fracturing following a root canal treatment.

We would like to provide you with a few reminders from the PRC Program, so that we can assure your off-site medical/dental bills are being paid in a timely manner.

- Always call the Business Office/PRC for a Purchase Order Number for your referred services, and for each follow-up appointment.

- These provided tips will ensure that we know about your Provider visit and can make sure that there is a PO issued for your services.
- Purchase Orders (PO's) are needed for each appointment and are a requirement for PRC assistance, as this is how we monitor needed PRC funds for the year and how we track your services, for payment.
 - We send reports to the doctor's office quarterly, of all open PO#'s for PRC, this will include only those that have obtained their PO# authorizations.
 - We work with outside provider billing offices to ensure claims are being properly submitted, so that we can pay them in a timely manner.

Providers don't always send PRC your bills, but if there is a

 your services to assure payment, by calling the providers.

oPRC corresponds with outside providers' billing departments on a regular basis, to inquire about open PO#'s that have not been paid, and to resolve any billing issues related to open PO#'s and the associated claims for services received. This is why making sure that you obtain a PO is crucial in assuring that we know about your services and we are able to address your claims.
